Corinne works with clients across a variety of industries, focusing on the management of domestic and international intellectual property portfolios, clearance, counseling, prosecution, and enforcement. She also assists clients with protecting intellectual property rights on the Internet through DMCA-related takedowns and domain name dispute resolution proceedings.

Prior to joining ArentFox Schiff as an associate, Corinne was a summer associate with the firm and previously served as a project assistant supporting global trademark portfolio management. She also gained hands-on intellectual property experience as a student attorney in The George Washington University Law School's Intellectual Property and Technology Law Clinic, where she managed trademark prosecution matters, represented a client in a trademark opposition proceeding, and counseled clients on trademark, copyright, and design protection strategies.

Life Beyond the Law

Outside of work, Corinne enjoys running, painting and sketching, and exploring all aspects of electronic music, from attending concerts to learning music production.
